MEMORIAL SERVICE IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

LOCAL MEMBERS OF ODDFELLOWS ORDER HONOR MEMBERS PASSED BEYOND

Three members of the local lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows who have passed beyond mortal life, especially those of the three branches in town, were the subject of a memorial service held last night at the new L.O.O.F. hall, and conducted by Chaplain the Rev. W. S. Brooker.

In addition to the members from town lodges, members of the Order were here from several surrounding lodges, and including among these were grand lodge officers of both sexes.

The services of the service were conducted by the appropriate scripture readings and the singing of hymns, and the singing of hymns, as well as a nicely-rendered vocal solo by Sister M. Carrell.

The address of the afternoon was given by Bro. A. C. Woodward, Grand Patriarch of the Order in Alberta, from Edmonton, who spoke very feelingly from the text, "And though we walked with God, and God took him, and Enosh was no more." In his remarks the speaker pointed out the glorious certainty of a resurrection day when all shall be again joined together in the realms of light, where those who had gone before were awaiting us at this time.

The draping of the charter ceremony was accompanied by the reading of the names of those former members who had joined the Great Grand Lodge above; and at the close of the religious exercises, the gathering, under the guidance of Bro. R. Dumoreau, P.G., who was chairman for the day, all journeyed to the cemetery by auto where floral tributes were placed upon the graves of the departed members.

HARVEST LABOR VERY PLENTIFUL

According to advices from Calgary men are being placed every day in harvest work throughout the south end of the province, although the demand for harvest labor is somewhat lighter than in previous years in view of the number of men awaiting employment in many of the country towns.

Farmers generally are offering $2.50 per day for stockmen, and about $3 a day for binder men, which is approximately $1 a day less than the going wages at this time last year.

Miss Muriel Whitman has been spending a short vacation at Viking.

WAR VETERAN'S ALLOWANCE ACT

WHO IS ELIGIBLE EXPLAINED BY PROV. SECRETARY OF CANADIAN LEGION

Mr. Art. Wolosyn, the provincial secretary of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., in Alberta, through the courtesy of The Star announces the benefits of the War Veterans' Allowance Act which becomes effective on September 1st next.

Subject to the provisions of the above Act, allowances are payable to veterans of the Great War (1914-21) who saw service in an actual theatre of war. Men who saw service in Canada or England only, are not eligible unless they are pensioned or have received a final payment for a disability of five per cent or more in lieu thereof.

The applicant must have attained the age of sixty years or be permanently unemployed by reason of physical and (or) mental disability.

The Act contains reservations as to income, restricts the amount payable at $20.00 per month to a single man or $40.00 a month to a married man, and requires one year's residence in Canada immediately prior to application.

In Alberta the men should apply to the department of Pensions & National Health, either at Calgary or Edmonton, for a preliminary application form.

Any prospective applicant in doubt as to the operation of the Act can receive full information from any chartered branch of the Legion of Alberta.

LOCAL RESIDENT LOSES BROTHER

Numbered among the pioneer residents of the Edmonton district since he came to the area with his parents 37 years ago, William O. Donovan died here Wednesday while still a comparatively young man.

He was born in Glamorgan county, Ontario, 49 years ago and came to Edmonton at the age of 12 years. His father, J. R. Donovan, was one of the first settlers in the Riviere du Beave district.

Mr. Donovan is survived by his mother, Mrs. J. R. Donovan, 11229 69 st., five sisters, Mrs. Elinor, Edmonston; Mrs. Conway, Vancouver; Mrs. McNamee, Windsor, Ont.; Mrs. P. Kelly, St. Albert, Alberta; Mrs. E. H. Hoth, Los Angeles, Cal., and three brothers, James of Port Pittsburg, N.W.T., John of Logan, Mont., and Everett, Wainwright. Funeral arrangements will be made later by Connolly & McKinley—Journal.

REMEMBER HOSPITAL FRUIT SHOWER

No doubt many good housewives will remember that "it is more blessed to give than to receive" and in this connection The Star is again making its annual plea for ONE QUART OF FRUIT OR PICKLES for the Hospital.

Donations to this shower can be left at this office, and an empty sealer will be given in exchange. When doing up the fruit this season please do up just one or two more for this cause in the full knowledge that the gift will be deeply appreciated.

HOT DRY WEATHER RIPENING ALL GRAINS

The Bank of Montreal crop report says the weather generally in the three prairie provinces is hot and dry, and all grains are ripening rapidly. Harvesting is now general in Manitoba and should be in full swing in Alberta and Saskatchewan in a few days. Rust has reduced grades in Manitoba and is taking toll in eastern and northeastern Saskatchewan. In Quebec the weather continues favourable, and a good average crop of barley and oats is expected. In Ontario while some sections are suffering severely from drought, the weather has been favorable for harvesting which is well advanced. In the Maritime Provinces indications are that the crop of oats will be above the average. In British Columbia usually light weather prevails but crops generally are expected to come up to previous estimates. Details follow:

In Alberta, Northeastern, crops are ripening rapidly and harvesting will be general in about a week. The estimated yield is 10 to 25 bushels. Southeastern, about 35 per cent of the wheat cutting is completed and first threshing returns indicate an average yield of 10 bushels, which is slightly better than was expected. Western area, harvesting has commenced and will be general in seven days. The estimated yield is from 8 to 25 bushels. Some further regional hail damage is reported. The sugar beet crop is satisfactory. Saskatchewan, rapid ripening conditions have continued and cutting is now well under way, with prospects generally for a fair to average yield.

OBITUARY

HAPPY BARN DANCE ON FRIDAY NIGHT LAST

One of the good old-time barn dances (the title of which is seldom witnessed now-a-days) took place at the home of Norman Cooper on Friday evening last. Quite a big crowd were on hand to enjoy the dandy old-time music, and many of the dancers were among those present when the big barn was fire, little more than two years ago. At midnight, all set down to a real barny lunch, and it was just about sunrise the party "only it a day (or night) it was truly a happy time, and brought back many happy memories to a number of those present.

PENIN. TO FINISH WAINWELL WORK

MERGER ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETE IS REPORT NOW GIVEN TO PRESS

According to the current issue of the Oil Examiner, sufficient financing to assure further development in the Wainwright field has been arranged by Petroleumists. Petroleumists, according to advices from the east, it is expected that the first work undertaken will be the completion of wells formerly owned by Wainwell Oil.

Arrangements were completed the past week by Peninsular Petroleum officials which will allow for the exchange of shares of that company for shares of Wainwell.

The merger of the two companies was passed by the respective shareholders in March, 1930, and Wainwell shareholders were to receive one share of Peninsular Petroleum stock for each 10 shares of Wainwell stock held. Complete exchange, however, has been delayed until the recent changes were put into operation.

Upon completion of exchange of shares, the outstanding capital stock of Peninsular Petroleum will be $500,000 shares of no par value against an authorization of 1,000,000 shares.

Dr. H. C. Wallace is away this week in attendance at the big Medical Association convention at Winnipeg, where he will be joined by Mrs. Wallace and family who have been holidaying with friends and relatives at Regina Beach.

HAIL DAMAGE IS HEAVY THIS YEAR

LOSSES MAY EQUAL PREMIUMS PAID BY FARMERS OVER PROVINCE

Hail losses in Alberta's 1930 crop will be considerably heavier than last year, and may possibly exceed those experienced on the average over the past five years, according to figures compiled by insurance companies in the city.

Losses paid this season as a result of storms did heavy damage in several sections of the province will run from 85 to 100 per cent of the premiums paid by farmers, it is estimated by the head of one company, while other place the loss at a figure in excess of 100 per cent, as compared with approximately 50 per cent of the premiums returned in loss payments last year. The 1928 payments, on the other hand, exceeded premium payments by approximately 50 per cent.

No figures are available as to the loss experienced by the farmers whose crop has been covered this season by the municipal hail insurance board, but on the basis of the figures compiled by the insurance companies it is understood that the loss in a number of the more seriously affected districts are due for upward revision.

STANDS THE TEST

Garnet wheat, developed by the Cereal Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture does nothing by the grueling tests to which it was subjected at the hands of twenty of the world's outstanding authorities on milling and baking in Great Britain and on the Continent. Not only is Garnet firmly established as a high quality wheat, but as an "improver" of blends has a promising future.

Since its introduction in 1926 it has extended the hands of twenty of the world's outstanding authorities on milling and baking in Great Britain and on the Continent. Not only is Garnet firmly established as a high quality wheat, but as an "improver" of blends has a promising future.

CUTTING STARTED

This week sees a start made on cutting the first of the 1930 crop for this district, and the results are showing that the returns will likely give as good or better yields than have been anticipated.

In this immediate district, fortune has favored our farmer friends, in that neither hail, rain, frost, etc., have done any damage to the crop and from all appearances at this time the Wainwright district should reap as bountiful a crop as ever was taken off. We learn that prospects are for a 28 to 30 bushel yield of wheat in some places, while oats may go around the 100 bushel mark.

CHANGE SOUGHT IN INCOME TAX

SASK. MINISTER WOULD ASK DOMINION TO SHARE UP REVENUE

REGINA—With the intention of asking the Dominion government to share up the federal income tax with the provinces, a conference between the provincial governments of Canada and the Dominion government, was forecast by Hon. Howard McConnell, minister of municipal affairs, addressing the annual convention of the associated committee of secretaries-treasurers of the rural municipalities here.

Making his announcement with respect to a division of the federal income tax, Mr. McConnell pointed out that the provincial governments were faced with the necessity of providing for additional sources of revenue to meet increasing demands for services.

The minister said that deficits were common in the provinces from the Atlantic to the Pacific and surpluses used to be. The British North America Act, he pointed out, had given the Dominion the whole field of direct and indirect taxation, whereas the provinces were limited to the direct form of taxation, and they did not wish to impose a provincial tax in Saskatchewan.

The provinces were quite justified in going to the federal government and asking for some readjustment in their taxes, and to ask for an amendment to the B.N.A. Act for some measure of relief. "I suggest," he said, "that it would be legitimate for the provinces to say to the federal government, 'We want, some division of the income tax, and that some of it is to come to the provinces.'"

LOCAL NOTES

Mr. Fred Pawling, who has been holidaying with his parents left for his manager's desk at the Bank of Montreal at Mundare last week.

Old timers in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Elder will be visiting with their children this week. They will be the guests of Mrs. W. T. Brunker for a couple of weeks.

It is understood that the city of Calgary has recovered the great disease of infantile paralysis among its children. Four deaths have occurred there among the dozen or more cases noted. Stringent preventive measures are being taken.

Little Mary Ricketts, of Hope Valley, who was admitted to the hospital on Friday last, with a fractured arm is now getting along nicely.

BLOOMINGTON VALLEY RESIDENT PASSES ON

JOHN MILLARD MUCH RESPECTED OLD TIMER SUCCEEDS TO HEART FAILURE

Passing away quietly in his sleep during last Thursday night, Mr. John Millard, one of the old-timers of the district succumbed to cardiac trouble from which he has been a sufferer for a long time, at the age of 73 years and 9 months.

The deceased was always of a happy disposition and a highly respected farmer, was born in Aylmer, Ontario, and came to Alberta in 1913 settling down on the farm where he has since spent his life. His holdings were always one of the show places, and although not large in size was fully productive.

The late Mr. Millard was always fond of cattle, and he had built up a splendid herd of high-class animals on the place. He was a faithful member of the Anglican church and a hard worker in that cause until his health commenced to fail from heart trouble some two or three years ago.

He was married first to Miss Florence Garrett, who predeceased him in 1921, and later took Miss Susan Blackley, of Lamarkshire, Scotland, to wife. He leaves to mourn the loss of a dear husband and father, a daughter and one son and three daughters, these being J. E. Millard, Aylmer, Ont.; Mrs. H. Triemey, St. Thomas, Ont.; and Mrs. Van Valzer, of Wilkie, Sask.

THE FUNERAL

The funeral service for the deceased was held on Sunday last at his late home at Bloomington Valley, where a large gathering of neighbors and sympathizers were present. The service was conducted by Rev. G. Peake, of the Edmonton Anglican church, who spoke feelingly and eulogistically from I. Cor. ii, 35-36. During the service favorite hymns of the deceased were sung by all present.

The pallbearers were Messrs. B. Hill, T. Basley, J. Chaffenger, R. Smith, I. Noble and G. Buchanan, while the casket was borne with sympathy and respect were placed upon the coffin from Mr. and Mrs. B. Hill and Mrs. C. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. S. Pawsey, Mrs. Sager, Mrs. Mc Bride, and others.

The funeral arrangements were in the hands of McLeod & Sons of Wainwright, who at the close of the service shipped the body to Aylmer, Ont. where it will be interred in the family plot. Mrs. Millard accompanied the remains of her late husband to their final resting place.

Miss Evelyn Kemp was visiting friends in Battleford last week.

BIG WESTERN TALKIE FINE ENTERTAINMENT

SHOWS AT ELITE THEATRE ON THURSDAY, FRIDAY & SATURDAY

Fast action, a rattling good story with dialogue, music and sound effects, that combine to make splendid entertainment, marks "North of 49" a filmed drama of the great open spaces, which comes to the Elite Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Neal Hart, the star, who also directed the picture, and Barbara Kent, in the featured feminine role, both with their share of the audience's approval and prove by their performance not only their superior artistic talents, but also that they have plenty of sheer nerve and consummate daring.

The "chuck-wagon" race, for instance, in the third reel, has more real thrills in it than the famous fight for moons of ancient Rome, at least as far as they have been depicted to date on the screen. There is also a stampede of some thousand wild horses, that is the real thing, with enough kidding, bucking broncos and high jinks with horned cattle by cow boy experts with rope and spur, to satisfy the most exacting film fan.

Hart rescues the heroine twice in breath-taking fashion. Once he swings in mid-air from his lariat, and lifts her clear from her seat behind a runaway team, just as horses and wagon plunge over a high cliff. In the last reel he saves her again, by means of the same trusty rope just as the cord frays out which will plunge her to death a thousand feet below.

As the first out and western feature to be made with dialogue and song effects, "North of 49" sets a new high mark as screen entertainment. Don't miss it!

The Wedding Ring

"Yes sir. Saw everyone who had to do with them. She couldn't describe them."

"I'd like to talk to the chambermaid," Reggie said. "Come on, Be!" The Victory Hotel is a modest place. The manager, a brisk and competent Swiss, received another police inquiry with resignation. He could say, recall the Marchals clearly; an impression that the man was a big blond and spoke English not like an Englishman, that was all. It was his habit to go round the tables at dinner and speak to the guests, but they did not dine in the hotel.

Reggie stirred. "Oh, madame stayed on two days after the doctor departed. But she didn't have dinner."

"She did not have dinner. That is sure. When the doctor departed, I do not know. They engaged a room for two persons and they pay for two all the time. But there are meals charged for one only. See?" He produced his books. "Breakfast for one—lunch for one—breakfast for one in the bed room the next day and the next. Then the bill is paid and the room given up."

"That's clear enough. Bell looked at Reggie. The man never came back here after he went out the first evening."

Reggie gave no sign of hearing. "How did she pay her bill?" he murmured.

How? The manager stared. She paid for her room. She paid the chambermaid."

"Breakfast and lunch on the day after she came—then nobody saw her but the chambermaid?"

"I see. Yes," Reggie contemplated him with dreamy eyes. "The Marchals have never been here before?"

The manager shrugged. "What do I know? No one remembers them they appear to be of the type of which we have many. Good bourgeois—French, German, Swiss, Dutch Belgian—all come to us, and English who travel. Business people. You understand sir, this is a most respectable hotel."

"Quite. You ought to be a judge of nationality. And you think Marchal wasn't English. What was he?"

The manager hesitated. "I think perhaps he is French. But do not trust to that."

"Oh no. I won't. Now it's made, m'selle of the bureau, and the waiter, and the chambermaid, please. And your register."

Mademoiselle brought the register. "Dr. Marchal and Mrs. Marchal" was written in a small neat hand. "Might be his real name, it's done so naturally," Bell grunted. "Mademoiselle remembered Marchal as a big man with a fair beard, his wife in French and dark. The man's accent was French."

"No change in her manner, as time went on?" Reggie asked.

"But I do not remember."

The waiter also thought madame amiable. He supposed her French. Certainly she spoke to him in French. She was dark and small. But pretty without doubt. "What you call nice in English."

"You think so?" Reggie murmured. "Yes. He turned to the manager. 'Is the room which madame had vacated? Yes, it is vacant. But you will find nothing there. We have had people in there since. Also the superintendent. He said it before.'"

"That's all right. Nothing there," said Bell.

"No I suppose not," Reggie sighed. But I'd like to talk to the chambermaid in the room please."

"If you please. The manager led the way."

The room was of the bleak comfort standard in such hotels. Reggie surveyed it and signed. "Oh, a telephone."

"All our rooms have the telephone," said the manager proudly.

The chambermaid appeared. She would not understand anything or say anything. Reggie dropped into French. "Come, you have nothing to be afraid of have you? Speak frankly then. What is this you have noticed about Madame Marchal?"

She found her tongue and a clatter of Swiss French came. She had noticed nothing. She was tired of that madame Marchal. Scarcely she had seen her, and all the world asked questions. She desired never to hear of her again. A sickly, stinky creature. And of a vile temper. She had always believed madame was bad.

"When did you begin to believe that?"

As soon as she knew madame. Madame was of a temper. She kept her room. The room must be dark, nothing must be touched, she would not talk. And when she went, a shilling, she shilling."

"Yes. Too bad," Reggie purred. "But she wasn't in her room all the time?"

"No, not at first. It was after the first day. Then she seemed always to be there. The door was always locked; she would not have the blind up. A sickly thing."

"I see. French, weren't they?"

"So they say downstairs. Me, I do not believe it. When I heard them talking together, it was not French."

"German?"

"No. It was like German a little, but not German. I do not know what it was."

"Did they leave anything?"

The chambermaid was embarrassed. "She would not leave anything, that one," she said vehemently. "But I remember. There was a box it had pictures—and empty box?" Could she find it? She hustled out.

She came back in triumph. "Voilà. You see, just a picture's box, empty."

Reggie took it. It bore the words "Robert. Montagne de la Cour." He took it into his hands some crumbs. "Empty," he said, "but it is worth five shillings, my dear?" He wandered out.

Bell pursed him. He was already in the car and it began to move as Bell was getting in. "Sorry sir," Bell struggled off his lap. "In a hurry, are we?"

"Yes. Still panting far behind. But not without hope."

Bell looked at the convalescent face and saw dreamy amiability. You are feeling happy?" he said with surprise.

"Not happy. No," Reggie murmured. "If I could find out who telephoned to that woman I might be. It was probably after lunch on the second day. Hence the accusation."

"How can you know?" Bell grumbled.

"Look at the facts, after lunch comes a change. She shuts herself up. She kept the room dark, having been amiable downstairs, she is found peevish. Obviously something happened. And the telephone must have been in it."

Bell meditated. "Looks like Munk. She might have got news they didn't manage to do you in. But how can we trace who telephoned to a woman in the hotel?"

"We can't. I know that. A diabolical invention," Reggie sighed. "Well, well, let us use it."

"What do you want to do?"

"I want to telephone to Prof. De Larey. He lives in Brussels."

"Brussels?" Bell stared. "How do you make out we want Brussels?"

"That one thing and another, and the confectory is conclusive. Pain a la Grecque is plain stuff."

"I saw you'd got something out of that box."

"Only crumbs. But they were pain a la Grecque all right. And the box came from a gentleman who keeps a shop in the Montagne de la Cour. So that settled it."

"Oh, did it?" Bell grunted.

"Yes, I think so. Considering all things, the name Marchal—which is probably French. The accent which might be German. But not German—might be Flemish. As the name the Marchals are Belgian, and those facts are covered. They make a pain a la Grecque special good in Brussels, and the Montagne de la Cour is in Brussels, and the Montagne is in Brussels, steep street up by the Museum. So I will ring up old De Larey and ask him if he knows Dr. Marchal."

Bell stared at him. "And I told you there was nothing to get at the hotel. The car turned toward Scotland Yard. An hour afterwards, Reggie came out of a telephone booth and wandered away to Lomas's room. He dropped into a chair and wiped his face. 'A fiendish invention. Praise God, I shall never know what French sounds like over a telephone.' He shuddered. 'De Larey sounds like a revelation. But that was after, for the first week or two he was a lorry changing gear. Before my screams roused his interest.'"

"So he knows about Marchal?" Lomas was impatient.

Reggie waved a hand at him. "De Larey does know Marchal. Dr. Quemlin Marchal was a chemist. Special work in Brussels, in Holland and in Switzerland. Make the world's supply of delfium."

"Use it in medicine, don't you?"

"Yes, quite a lot. Well that's who the genuine Dr. Marchal is. But De Larey hadn't heard of his leaving Brussels. Thought it unlikely. He's going to find out. If the real Marchal has left Brussels, some of your men had better find out where Sir Layne Gorton's got to. If it was the real Marchal who came to London, we have a clever chemist in the employ of a big company, going, privately and by stealth, to the door of a rival manufacturer and vanishing—with wife. That wants a lot of explanation."

In the morning the detective who kept watch in his house met him as he came down to breakfast. "Mr. Lomas would like to see you when you feel up to it."

Lomas was found alone.

"Well, my dear Reggie, the case is taking a queer turn. Your professor telephoned last night. He tells me that Marchal is not to be found in Brussels nor Madame Marchal, he said the employees, this S. A. I. if they knew what had become of him, and could get no information. They understood that Marchal was away on private affairs. I have felt justified in making the Brussels police to take it up."

"Oh, yes. But what about Sir Layne Gorton?"

"Well, on that report as we are agreed, I gave instructions to locate Gorton. It is not certain but we have reason to believe he is down at his works at Brith."

"Living at the works?" Reggie's sleepy eyes opened. "What seal?"

"He has rooms there. Well, I've sent Bell down to make sure he is there. Very awkward affair."

A man brought in a card.

Dr. Doelen was a short wide man with a big head. "Mr. Lomas?" He smiled and bowed. "It is kind of you to receive me. Perhaps I do not need to explain who I am."

"Can I take it you come from the Societe Anonyme Internationale?"

"As you know I am the managing director in Brussels."

"Quite," Lomas nodded. "What can I do for you. By the way, do you know Mr. Fortune?"

"I have, of course, heard of Dr. Fortune. Dr. Doelen again bowed. Then he said:

"I speak in confidence gentlemen. You understand, I represent large interests and I assure I shall be grateful for your help. The affair is this. Last week a young man of science whom we employ in our laboratories at Brussels was absent without leave. His name is Dr. Quentin Marchal. We felt some anxiety. He is a brilliant fellow and his work is valuable. Also, I could not ignore that he had important knowledge of our processes of manufacture. We made inquiries and it appeared that both he and his wife had left Brussels, travelling to London. Pray understand me, I don't accuse Dr. Marchal. It is very possible that his sudden flight may be on account of some personal trouble. But also, Dr. Marchal has the secrets of our laboratories."

"Quite. It is suggested that Dr. Marchal has committed a crime."

"Mr. Lomas, I suggest nothing. I tell you the facts. This young man has disappeared and it seems in London. I appeal to you to discover what has become of him."

A paper was brought to Lomas. "Hold the line," he said to the messenger, and passed the paper to Reggie. "Telephone message Superintendent Bell to Mr. Lomas" was written. "Woman found drowned in creek near Gorton works. Clothing marked Adele Marchal. Have not yet seen Gorton. Waiting instructions."

"Well, my Reggie murmured. Dr. Doelen, do you know Mr. Marchal?"

Doelen stared. "I have seen her."

"Would you know her if you saw her?"

"Certainly. Have you news of her? They say she has been found dead. 'Horrible!' Doelen cried. But where? 'Found drowned somewhere down the river. I'm afraid you'll have to go and see the body.'"

"I? But what can I do?"

"You can tell if she is Madame Marchal."

"It is possible, yes, if she is not injured. I suppose you have reason—"

"Oh, yes. I saw her on her clothes," Reggie stood up. "But you are the only man we have who know her."

"I'm afraid we must ask you to identify doctor," Lomas rose.

"I am at your orders," said Doelen again. "But what was the poor creature doing down the river?"

"That is what we are going to find out," said Reggie. "On moment," he went out with Lomas.

"Queer thing," said Lomas, "this case gets worse and worse."

"Yes. I did tell you so," Reggie murmured. "Go on, tell Bell to watch the fine, quick career of the river model break away. We'll be on her clothes when we've seen the corpse you take Doelen in your car. I'll go on first."

On a slab in the mortuary the woman's body lay.

Reggie bent over her. He moved the eyelids from the contracted pupils. He looked at the surgeon. "Anything occur to you?"

"Medically speaking I should say it is a plain case. There's no injuries. All the indications point to death by drowning."

"You think so? Where was she found?"

"In a bit of a tidal creek by Gorton's works. Queer place for a drowning to get in. Not much of a place to drown. But drowned she was."

"Yes, I expect we'll have to say that. But there's a lot of work first. Notice her eyes? I should think she was under morphia when she was put into the water."

He looked again at the body.

He drew off the wedding ring, peered at the inside. "Well, well. Over his troubled face came a slow smile. He wondered out. Lomas and Doelen were already in the waiting room. Doelen looked at him uncomfortably. "Is she much disfigured, Mr. Fortune?"

"That for you to say, isn't it?" Reggie murmured. "Come along. There."

Doelen approached the body. "Yes my friends," he said. "This is Madame Marchal."

Marchal.

"No doubt about it," said Lomas. "I can have no doubt, Doelen turned from the body and stared at them. 'But how?' What brought her here? 'We'll have to discuss that,' said Reggie. 'Just wait, will you? I'd like you to meet Sir Blayne Gorton.'"

"Blayne Gorton!" Doelen cried. "The chemical manufacturer?"

"Yes. He has works down here did you not know?"

"How should I know? I do not know where I am. Gorton—is it possible? The Gorton combine is in rivalry with my company. And it is beside his works that you find Madame Marchal dead, where is Marchal then? What does this mean?"

"We'll ask Gorton," said Reggie. "If you will wait."

"Wait? Here?" Doelen looked around in horror.

"No, in here. No. They'll make you quite comfortable!" Reggie spoke to the policeman at the gate.

"Come on Lomas," he cried and jumped into his car. Gorton's works. The car stopped at the gate of a large factory and Superintendent Bell appeared from nowhere. They were taken to the works manager. He regretted that Sir Blayne Gorton was not there. If he could do anything—

"You can find him," Lomas snapped. "At once. Tell him to bring Mr. Marchal."

Suddenly a flag man burst into the room.

"What is all this now? What are you giving me?" he puffed.

"I want to know why a woman bearing the name of Adele Marchal has been found near your works," said Lomas.

Gorton gulped. "Let's get that," he muttered. "Madame Marchal dead down here. Natural?"

"Apparently drowned," said Lomas. Gorton stared at him. "Why would she—? It's not possible. It spoke rather to himself than to Lomas."

Lomas said: "You've got Dr. Marchal here."

"What do you mean?" Gorton pulled himself together. Marchal is here—been here for days—but he hasn't seen Madame Marchal. I can swear to that."

"You'll probably have to. You had better begin by explaining why he's here in hiding."

"Hiding! Marchal's here at work for me."

"While he is in the employ of the Society Anonymus International. No wonder you kept it a secret."

"I've my answer to that. And so has he. He's got a new process for extracting delium. Dr. Doelen would not take it. The S.A.I. have got their monopoly and they don't want a process that will make the stuff cheap. Suits them better to keep down production and sell dear—with all the hospitals in the world calling out for delium. So Marchal chucked up his job with them and came over to England to get somebody to take up the new process. He came to me and I brought him down here to try it out."

"That explains his presence," said Lomas coldly. "It doesn't explain his wife's death."

Gorton's confidence forsook him again. "I'll swear Marchal knows nothing about it."

"Well, produce him. He'll have to come and see her," said Lomas. Gorton stared at him and went out. He's got the wind up," said Lomas.

"I wonder," Reggie murmured. And in a hurry Marchal came, a big bearded man in tumbled clothes. "What is this he tells me? His sunken eyes blazed. 'My wife is here. Here it is not possible. My wife in the Victory hotel in London.'"

"No. That's where she isn't," said Reggie quickly. Come along. We have lost too much time already."

"You take me to see her—her body The big frame shook. Let us go then quick, quick!" Reggie led the way.

"I shall want you too, Lomas said to Gorton."

"And you'll have me too," Gorton scowled. "I'll see the lad through it." They hurried to the car and drove back to the mortuary. Reggie took Marchal's arm. "Now," he drew back the sheet which covered the dead woman."

And Marchal burst out laughing. Then, "God forgive me!" he said. "It is not my wife."

"Look at her clothes," said Reggie gently.

"Yes. I think—fear came into his eyes again."

and fortune to drag Marchal off and hold him. Doelen lay still and pale.

"Is he dead?" Lomas muttered.

Reggie knelt beside him. "No. He will come around. As he spoke Doelen started, tumbled over and over and booted out. Bell ran after him. Doelen got out of the mortuary, he rushed into the trunk of the highroad, and a truck hit him."

"My only aunt, Reggie moaned. Bell thrust his way through the gathering crowd to Reggie's side. Gone, sir?"

"Yes. Job for the experts in another world. Bring him in. Oh through his pockets. I want an address—any sort of an address."

"To the room where Marchal raged, Bell came back with a cigarette-case, a wallet, and a bunch of keys. 'No thing else on him sir.'"

"You go to Scotland Yard Marchal and wait," Reggie said. Look after him. Gorton? He beckoned to Lomas and Bell turned away.

"Sir, sir, have you any hope," Lomas caught at him.

"I don't know Reggie said. 'I'm still fighting.'"

"What's the move now?"

"The S.A.I. ought to have a London office. Yes, here we are—Graham Lane. Come on." He hustled into his car. "Graham Lane in the city. San. Rush."

"You want to bluff Doelen's men?" Lomas smiled.

"Yes. Your strong suit Lomas. The chief of the Criminal Investigation Department was introduced to a vague Englishman."

"I want to know where Mr. Doelen has been staying."

The manager was politely amazed. There must be some mistake. Dr. Doelen was in Brussels."

"Oh, no, he is not. We have him safe enough. Unless you want to be arrested as an accessory, you'd better tell the truth."

The manager shook, he did not understand. Accessory to what?

"You'd better think of murder. Now Out with it. Where has Doelen been staying?"

The manager really had no idea. Dr. Doelen had a flat in Adelaide Mansions, generally stayed there when in London."

"Don't try to be clever. You know he has some other place. Where is it?"

Dr. Doelen occasionally gave instructions when in London to ring up Tyburn 701."

Lomas took the telephone from his table and asked the authorities for the name and address of Tyburn 701."

"Thank you, Good By. Now my man and your staff hold you at the disposal of the police. No one will leave the office till my men have seen them."

Reggie was already hurrying them out. He opened the door of the car. "Where is Lomas?"

"Blacon, 3 Nicholas Street, Baywater."

"They came to the door of No. 3 and Bell was going to ring."

"No. Use Doelen's keys," said Reggie, and with the second of them the door was opened. "Now ring." An oldish man appeared and gaped.

"I'm a police officer. Superintendent Bell. This is Mr. Doelen's house."

"Dr. Doelen is not in, sir."

"Is the lady in?" said Reggie.

"The lady, sir?"

"Where is she?" Reggie snapped.

"Is it Dr. Doelen's secretary, sir? I'm afraid she is not well enough to see you."

Bell took hold of him. "You'll show me where she is quick."

"Oh, very good sir. If you say so. She is in bed you know. Bell pushed him on up-stairs."

"They came into a little dark room at the back. A woman lay the bed her face buried in the pillow. She was asleep or unconscious. Her breath came moaning. 'How long has she been like this?' said Reggie."

"I really couldn't say sir. Dr. Doelen was going to send a doctor."

"Take him away," Reggie muttered. He sat down by her side. "When he rose his face was drawn and he bit his lip."

"I should say it is meningitis. Ring up Robert Blake and ask him to come around. Then Wimpole house for nurses."

Lomas returned. "Blake's coming at once. And two nurses. I suppose this is Madame Marchal?"

Reggie pointed to her hand. "Her wedding-ring's gold. Yes, Who else?"

"Meningitis!" Lomas frowned, queer isn't it, is there a chance for her?"

"I wonder," Reggie murmured. Stand by will you. I want to look around."

He was still looking when the specialist came. Nurses were established in charge, the specialist departed and Reggie came down to Lomas.

What's the opinion?"

"Still fighting," Reggie smiled. Not without hope. You see this beastly disease you have to know the type of organism that brought it before you can apply the right serum. Well I've got the stuff that infected her. Doelen has a little laboratory on the top floor and there it is: diplococcus meningitidis, fine and large."

"He gave it to her? The devil...."

"Yes, as you say," Reggie murmured. Lots of risks in being up against Dr. Doelen."

Some days afterward, he wandered into Lomas's room and remarked that he was going to see if there's anything is doing well?

Yes. She's out of danger. Nothing else for me, is there?"

"No. You are not necessary Reggie. We have established that those thugs who set on you were brought over from Brussels and they've gone back. So that is up to the Belgians. The woman drowned was a secretary of Doelen's. No doubt he murdered her. It's a mad case."

"Quite clear, isn't it?" Reggie opened his eyes.

"Good God! Do you pretend to see it?"

"Yes, I think so. Doelen was a very clever fellow but subject to fright. Dangerous combination. Begin at the beginning. He wouldn't take up Marchal's process for fear of cheapening delium would he? His profits. Marchal rushed off to England to find a manufacturer with more pluck. He had heard of me from old Delaney as a man of science who knew the world a bit. So he came to ask me if Gorton would give him a square deal I was not in, he got tired of waiting and decided to chance it. Off he went to Gorton and old Gorton jumped at the process and hurried him down to the works to try it out. Meanwhile Doelen got on his track. The secretary woman was sent to find out if Marchal had described the process to me. I was so discreet she thought he had. So Doelen set his thugs on to wipe me out and went after Marchal. But Marchal, being in Gorton's works was out of reach. The only way to attack was through the wife. Doelen sent her a telephone message that a car was coming to take her to Marchal. And it took her to the house in Baywater."

"She doesn't know what happened then, till she found herself in bed, feeling very ill. No doubt Doelen chloroformed her and put her to bed and gave her a dose of diplococcus meningitidis. The secretary woman was sent back to pass for her at the hotel. Partly to prevent inquiries into her vanishing—very cautious man—Doelen—partly to pick up any communication from her husband. I dare say Doelen still had hopes of trapping Marchal too. Then the secretary may have got the wind up, or wanted too much money. Anyway it occurred to him that she might do nicely to get Marchal arrested for murdering his wife—so he drugged her and put her into Madame Marchal's clothes and dumped her into the creek. And then he heard from Brussels the London police were asking questions concerning the Marchals. Another lesson in the case brothers; economy is a mistake in crime."

"What the deuce do you mean?"

"The wedding ring," Reggie smiled.

The nearly new and garish wedding ring of the sham Madame Marchal. If I hadn't thought that looked brass, I would of told her I hadn't seen Marchal. And we should never have got near the case, till the real Madame Marchal had died quietly of meningitis and Marchal was arrested for murder. But the poor woman bought a brass wedding-ring. Don't ever do that Lomas."

THE BOOK THAT EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW

Many years ago an article was published called "A Row of Medicine Bottles." As a short guide to that book which everybody should know, it will be repeated:

"If you're doubtful or depressed read the 29th Psalm."

"If there is a chilly sensation about the heart read the 3rd of Revelation."

"If you don't know where to look for the month's rent, read the 37 Psalm."

"If you feel lonesome and unprotected, read the 91st Psalm."

"If you find yourself losing confidence in men, read 1. Corinthians xiii."

"If people tell you with hard words read the 15th chapter of John."

"If you are getting discouraged about your work read the 12th Psalm or Galatians vi. 7-9."

"If you are out of sorts, read the 12th chapter of Hebrews."

The Bible contains 3,586,489 letters 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books.

The word "revere" occurs but once, which is in the 9th verse of the 111th Psalm.

The middle verse is the 8th verse of the 118th Psalm.

The finest chapter to read is the 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles.

The longest verse is the 9th verse of the 8th chapter of Esther.

The shortest verse is the 35th verse of the 11th chapter of St. John.

There are twenty-one recorded instances in which Jesus engaged in prayer.

Attached to a pencil now on the market is a hinged clip that not only serves to hold the pencil in the pocket, but when turned back on its hinge, is transformed into a convenient letter opener.

When rain falls on the sill of an electric window recently invented, a circuit is closed and the window automatically lowered, slowly and noiselessly, sparing the housewife the task of running from room to room to prevent damage from a storm.

WHY WE

DO IT?

(By Melman K. Thomson, Ph. D., author of "The Springs of Human Action")We put things off because we are born lazy. Not all of us are equally lazy. We are only as lazy as we dare to be. There are certain fundamental human desires which cure us of laziness.
It is more pleasant to work than to starve. Nevertheless, we do even the necessary things rather reluctantly because of sheer innate laziness.
Why do we put off doing something we dislike to do. Consciously or unconsciously we hope that something will turn up to relieve us of the necessity. There is why it is so easy to think up a thousand and one other things to do, such as filling our mail-reading the morning's paper, etc., when all the while we know we should be doing the thing we are avoiding.We put things off because we dread failure, and because we are afraid we lack ability to do the thing as it should be done. I know of a learned man who has spent twenty years on a manuscript which was ready for publication ten years ago. But he just can't let it go. He is afraid it may not be as good as it should be.In short, we put things off because of laziness, because we are afraid
we lack ability to do the thing as it should be done, or because we really do not want to do the thing at all or because we lack confidence in our ability.Putting things off is such a common ailment that perhaps a few practical suggestions will not be out of place.
Laziness may be overcome by proper habits of work. Have a set time for each specific task. Think up a lot of good reasons why the things should be done now.You can banish your dislike for unpleasant tasks by making a game of it and going out of your way to look for "trouble." A certain man of moderate ability who rose to prominence says that very early in his career he decided to do especially welland with unusual vigor the things he disliked. He got so he was looking for unpleasant chores.The dread of finicky and lack of confidence may be conquered by tricking yourself. For example, if you have an important letter to write and are afraid to tackle it, take a piece of waste paper and scribble what you have to say. When you get through you will find that you have formulated the thing as it should be. The trick is turned.

THE TOWN IS

WHAT WE MAKE IT

The small town belongs to the farmer. It exists mainly, if not exclusively, to serve him. It is the place he goes for a loaf of bread or a loaf at the bank. It is there, usually, that he attends a lodge meeting or a chickens pie supper. If the farmer never wanted a loaf of bread or a chickens pie supper there would not be any town. There might be a filling station and a hot-dog stand for the convenience of the traveller, but it would not be a town.Time was in the days of old roads and plow-horse travel, that we were more or less bound to the small village nearby. Now we can take it or leave it. If we choose, we can truck our grain and stock to a city, and we can go to the city for our clothes, food and entertainment. We hold the power of life and death over the little local town. If we neglect it, it must presently starve to death, for it has no means of self-support. A few small towns have so died, but most of them remain where we still want them. We may pretend to think lightly of that town, but still we want a location for our churches lodges and high schools. We still want a place close at hand where we can find a doctor, a druggist, a veterinarian, a ball of twine or a plow share.The sort of merchants we find in our town are the sort we support with our patronage. If we make a policy of dealing only with the man who carries a goodly assortment of dependable articles he will stay in business and prosper, and so he prospers he will naturally offer better assortments and better service. So with the kind of lawyers doctors and dentists. In a city farmers may not have much influence on the character of business and professional men, but in the little town farm patronage is the controlling influence.The little town is more than a convenience for buying everyday supplies. It is more than a first-aid in case of a broken leg, or a broken bender. It is the community centre where the social life of the farm people finds its most natural and potent expression. The casual contacts of people mingling with one another as they go about their errands are what bind a scattered people in to a community with a character all its own. Quite apart from any formal organization, the community spirit that centres in the farmers' town is the fundamental unit in the agricultural life of our country.Our little town represents us as we call our flock and herd, retaining those we want and eliminating those who do not measure up to our standards. We can influence its citizenship by choosing the doorways we enter and the counters over which we buy our goods. The little town is ours and it will be what we make it.

SHRUBS FROM SEED

(Experimental Farms Note)

Reproduction by seed is the method common to the majority of shrubs in their natural state and there seems little doubt that it is a method which produces the most healthy and vigorous plants.Seed should be obtained, if possible from a similar climate as that in which the seeds are to be sown, as true success depends on their ability to withstand the climatic conditions to which they have been transferred.Hard-coated seeds, many of which are enclosed in an outer covering, commonly called fruit, should have this removed when fully ripe and be thoroughly washed. These seeds should be sown at once and kept moist, or placed in a box covered with moist sand and stored in a cool place to be sown when convenient.
If hard-coated seeds are allowed to dry out, it may retard their germination.At the Dominion Experimental Station at Morden, where hundreds of shrubs and varieties are being raised from seed, the beds are prepared by adding humus and sand. This is thoroughly incorporated into the soil and raked to a fine surface. Frames are constructed of 8-inch boards placed 3 feet 9 inches apart and held in position by posts driven into the ground. As it is necessary to shade the seedlings, covers are prepared

A PACK OF CARDS

Here is a story that has been told and retold for many years in company where two or three have been gathered together. We had a copy pasted on to us with the request that we publish it for the benefit of those who enjoy such stories. Naturally the story is supposed to be true but we offer no guarantee.

A private soldier by the name of Richard Lee was taken many years ago before a magistrate of Glasgow Scotland, for playing cards during duty service, and the account of it is as follows:

A sergeant commanded the soldiers at church, and while there the parson read the prayers, and took the text. Those who had a bible took it out but this soldier had neither Bible or Common Prayer Book, but pulling out a pack of cards he spread them before him. He first looked at one card and then at another. The sergeant of the company saw him and said, "Richard put the cards away; this is no place for them." "Never mind that," said Richard.

When the services were over the constable took Richard a prisoner, and brought him before the magistrate. "What have you brought this soldier for?" "For playing cards in church." "Well, soldier, what have you to say for yourself?" "Much, sir I hope." "Very good! If not, I will punish you severely."

"I have been," said the soldier, about six weeks on the march. I have neither Bible or Common Prayer Book. I have nothing but a pack of cards and I hope to satisfy my worship of the purity of my intentions." Then spreading the cards before the bailie, he began with the ace of spades. "When I see the ace it reminds me of the Father and Son. When I see the three it reminds me of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. When I see the four, it reminds me of the four evangelists who preached—Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. When I see the five it reminds me of the five virgins that trimmed their lamps. There were ten but five were wise and five were foolish and were shut out. When I see the six it reminds me that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth. When I see the seven it reminds me that on the seventh day God rested from the great work which he had made, and hallowed it.

When I see the eight it reminds me of the eight righteous persons who were saved from the destruction of the world, viz. Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives. When I see the nine it reminds me of the nine lepers who were cleansed by our Saviour. There were nine out of ten who never returned thanks. When I see the ten it reminds me of the ten

Weaker Liverpool cables rain in the United States corn belt, and lack of export business, as far as Canada is concerned, all helped to lower prices

CUTS FIRST WHEAT
IN SASKATCHEWAN
The honor of cutting and threshing the first wheat in Saskatchewan this season goes to H. Woodley in the Redwood district, along the Canadian National Railway southwest of Regina.

While cutting is not expected to be general in the province for nearly three weeks. Mr. Woodley's record of cutting on July 25 and threshing on July 31 has never been equalled in Saskatchewan before. It is believed.

The "Reward" wheat, which Mr.
Woodley captures the honor with, is somewhat new in the province and an earlier wheat to mature, but produced fairly good yield to the acre.
His crop which was sown on April 17 was an experiment with Mr. Wood-ley, who is the only grain producer in the district using wheat of this kind.

August 29 to September 1, under the patronage of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales and the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway, one of the high-days when the clansmen were summoned to war by runners carrying a burning torch through the glens.

Seventeen Highland regiments in Canada have entered their best pipers to compete for valuable trophies. Lads and lassies dressed in the flash-

What Shall We Name The Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY
CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each new baby that comes into the world is indeed an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

No. 21—FLOYD DELL

I have no favorite names. My son they don't like those they have. I am named Anthony after my father. Any name is good if it isn't funny or ugly. The Southern Governor named Hogg, who named his daughter Ima and Ura had a misplaced sense of humor. Children ought not to be the victims of such cruel jokes. And children ought to be permitted to choose new names for themselves if ANTHONY is a name of Latin origin meaning "inestimable".

Mark Anthony was a famous figure in Roman history and is a character in two of Shakespeare's plays.

ANTOINETTE is a name of Latin origin meaning "inestimable".

CANADA IN GOOD

TRADE POSITION

OTTAWA—Canada maintained her position among the leading trading countries of the world in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1930, despite a sharp decline in export trade and a slight falling off in import trade. This is disclosed in the condensed preliminary report of the trade of Canada, 1930, issued Wednesday by the Dominion bureau of statistics.

The year was marked by an unfavorable balance of trade of $103,335,512, compared with a favorable balance the year before of $123,214,984. This was attributed to the falling off in the export of grains, particularly wheat, to the United Kingdom and continental Europe, due partly to lower yields.

In export trade, Canada leads the world in the export of printing paper, nickel, and asbestos; occupies second place in exports of automobiles, wheat and wheat flour; and fourth place in exports of wood pulp, as well as a very high place in the world's exports of such staple products as lumber, fish, copper, raw fur, whiskey, meats, rubber tires, farm implements and raw gold.

Makes His Last Run

Richard Christopher, for 50 years a mechanic, fireman and locomotive engineer on the Canadian Pacific Railway, opened a throttle for the last time recently when he took his train on the run from London to Windsor, Ontario. He has been selected on various occasions to handle special trains for distinguished Canadian visitors, including the Prince of Wales, Governor-General of Canada, the Duke of Connaught, and many others. It is his boast that in all these years he has never had a single accident. A touching feature of his last run was the fact that his son, Thomas, although also a locomotive engineer, acted as his father's fireman.

REFRESHING EATS FOR THIS WEEK (BY BETTY BARCLAY)

ICED COFFEE

The usual method of making iced coffee is to pour the hot beverage into glasses filled with ice—a simple process, which however, does not always give the best results.

Iced coffee should be made in this way only when it has been brewed double strength, for it will lose approximately half its strength by dilution when it is poured over the ice. If it is made fresh however, and of sufficient strength you will find this drink highly satisfactory.

But be sure to avoid another common mistake—brewing the coffee and then letting it stand in the pot or percolator for a long time. When this is done the coffee not only loses its delightful flavor and aroma, but it is also likely to be spoiled by a bitter taste from the metal vessel.

A new and unusual way to make iced coffee is to brew it slightly over normal strength and immediately place it in an air-tight jar, in the refrigerator to chill. When ready to serve put only a little ice in the glasses and pour in the already cooled beverage. The result is delicious.

JELLIED VEGETABLES

By Betty Barclay
Every one is urging us to eat more vegetables. Try serving some of them in jellied form and see how appealing they are. Here are two little recipes that will be of assistance.

Salad Supreme

- 1 package lemon flavored gelatin
- 1 pint boiling water (less 2 tablespoons)
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Shake of cayenne pepper.
- 2 cups cabbage cut fine
- 1 cup salt apple, cut fine
- Stuffed olives, cut fine

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add vinegar, salt, and cayenne pepper. Chill. When slightly thickened stir in cabbage, apples and olives. Put into individual molds, chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

Jellied Carrots and Peas

- 1 package lemon flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 3/4 cup vegetable stock or cold water
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 1 cup cooked carrots, diced
- 1 cup peas

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add vegetable stock or cold water, vinegar, salt and paprika. Chill. When slightly thickened fold in carrots and peas. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

TIPS FOR SUMMER GUESTS

Millions of summer guests are now basking on porches much cooler than those attached to their own homes. This means that millions of other women are now acting in the capacity of hostess to these guests.

Fussy guests are extremely welcome, but one does not have to stretch the imagination to suggest that others are tolerated rather than appreciated—particularly when the temperature is high and the hostess feels the necessity of preparing an elaborate dinner.

Thoughtful guests remember trouble they are giving their hostess friends and make a second visit a welcome one by leaving with the hostess some small token of their affection and appreciation.

A box of candy, a book, or something of this kind will more than make up for a little added work. It is the thought and not the value of the gift that counts. If there are children in the family, a box of candy should be chosen to include some of the varieties that children particularly like.

It is the thoughtful, appreciative guest who gets a return engagement.

TEN-MINUTE SALADS
Have you ever found yourself flustered because unexpected company arrived at a time when your larder was not as well stocked as you would like it to be.

An attractive salad goes a long way toward making a common meal seem an elaborate one. The colors of the fruits and vegetables tend to decorate the table, while the crispness and deliciousness always appeal to the sense of taste.

It is not necessary to go to a great deal of trouble to serve a satisfactory salad dish. Any one of a score of salads may be prepared in ten minutes. For instance, on two or three lettuce leaves you may place six orange sections and half a large pear corrod and sliced lengthwise. Alternate orange sections and slices of pear. Garnish with five or six grapes, peeled and seeded. Just before serving sprinkle with a combination of orange and lemon juice well sweetened.

Or try this surprising combination. Two orange slices, cut one-half inch thick. Arrange sandwich fashion with a fine slice of Bermuda onion in center. Garnish with sliced stuffed olives and serve the whole on crisp lettuce.

WHEAT: WHAT IS IT?

There are thousands of people buying and selling wheat, wrote an economist recently, who could not even tell a field of wheat from a field of any other grain.

With a view to dispelling some of the ignorance of Western Canada's primary product we commend the following, which has been gleaned from a recent issue of a financial publication. The information should be of interest at least to some of the thousands of people above referred to.

Wheat, it appears, is a seed that is planted and grown to keep the producer broke and the buyer crazy. It is planted in the spring mired in the summer and lost in the fall. Its quality varies according to the amount of rain or frost experienced during the growing season. A man who can guess nearest to this quality is called a wheat grader by the public and a fool by the farmer.

The price of wheat is determined at primary markets and goes down when one has bought and up when one has sold.

All of which reminds us of the story of the buyer, working for a group of millers, who came West to watch the wheat market. After a few days' deliberation he wired his principals to this effect: "Some think it will come down and some think it will go up. I think so too. Whatever you do will be wrong. Act at once."

PLEASE DO NOT SPIT

We have placed the title for this article in the form of a request rather than of a command or a threat. It might well be regarded as a plea for the protection of children, if it would be in the interests of all, but it is the children who are particularly menaced by the careless, thoughtless, or ignorant individuals who spit promiscuously.

The germs of disease live and multiply in the human body. A person may have such germs in his body and yet be apparently well. There are thousands of persons with tuberculosis who do not know that they have the disease, and these persons are passing out myriads of germs in their sputum.

These germs leave the body in its secretions, and the most common way is in the secretion of the mouth and nose. Mouth and nose secretions should always be thought of as containing disease germs, and should be avoided accordingly.

There is no reason for spitting as so many do. It is simply a bad habit which should never be started. If it is already a habit, then it should be broken without delay. It is not only disgusting to other people, but it constitutes a very real danger to them.

In the act of spitting droplets are sprayed around, and as other individuals come in contact with these droplets, they are exposed to infection by the germs of disease from which the spitter may suffer. Most of the common communicable diseases are spread chiefly by such drop infection and the danger that results from the spraying around of sputum and saliva cannot be exaggerated because it is so very serious.

Sputum on the floor or on the ground is dangerous. Children must and will play, and while they play, they are constantly on the floor or the sidewalk or ground. As a result, their hands are sure to become soiled. It is, of course, true that neither children nor adults should put their fingers into their mouths, but it takes time to train children not to do so.

Soiled hands are carried to the face. Fingers go in the mouth, and so the sputum from the floor or ground gets into the child's body, and it may carry with it the germs of disease.

Because it is a filthy, disgusting habit, because it spreads disease, because it endangers the lives of children, because there is no reason for its being done, we hope that you will treat favorably the request—PLEASE DO NOT SPIT.

THE TEN DEMANDANTS

Here is a list of 'ten demandants' said to hang in the offices of many business houses:

1. Don't lie. It wastes my time and yours. I am sure to catch you in the end, and that is the wrong end.
2. Watch your work and not the clock. A long day's work makes a long day short; and a short day's work makes my face long.

MUST CARRY CHIPMUNK

UP MOUNTAIN TO

FULFILL ELECTION BET

Because he lost his bet on the Dominion election, Frank Conway, of Toronto is spending his holidays at Jasper Park Lodge looking for a chipmunk weary of his home life. Mr. Conway, the day before the election took place, promised to catch a chipmunk and carry it to the timberline on Watonsville Mountain, if the Conservatives were returned. There are many chipmunks around Jasper Park Lodge and so far, all of them have been more nimble than Mr. Conway.

"The only thing I can do," protested Mr. Conway, "is to wait till I find a chipmunk that has domestic problems and wants to go somewhere. If I do catch one, I still have the Park Superintendent office to contend with because Jasper Park is a game preserve and so far as I know, there are no special exceptions to the regulation."

NOTHING TO BE GAINED

Seven years experimental work by the Lemnoxville Experimental Station of the Dominion Department of Agriculture shows that nothing is to be gained by deep ploughing on land of the type prevailing in this district. As a matter of fact the records tend to show increases in crop on the shallow ploughed land, and it would appear that ploughing four inches deep, or deep enough to allow for the preparation of a good seed bed, is all that is necessary. The average yield of corn, oats, clover and timothy on soil ploughed four inches deep was found to be higher than that from land ploughed seven inches deep.

FOR SALE

Half section of land for sale, three miles from Wainwright, 160 acres cultivated, 100 acres cropped and 60 acres of summer fallow. Price $4000.00 with $500.00 cash down; balance over seven years; interest at 7%. With larger cash payment down would make slight reduction in price.
